| Method | Description | Pros | Cons | Effectiveness |
| Female Condom | A latex "sheath" inserted into the vagina or anus. It has a flexible ring at each end. The ring that is inserted helps keep it in place, while the ring at the open end holds the condom open. | • Provides protection against sexually transmitted diseases. • Can be used for vaginal or anal sex. | • Cost. • It can slip into the vagina or anus during intercourse. • It can reduce feeling during intercourse (though the same as a traditional condom). | ~95% |
| Spermiocide | Foam, gel, cream, or film that contains chemicals that stop sperm from moving. It can be used alone or with other forms of birth control. It is always used with the diaphragm or cervical cap. | • Easily obtained. • Does not have an effect on women's hormone. | • Cost. • Does not protect against sexually transmitted diseases. • Can be irritating to the vaginal tissue. • Some people find it messy. | ~85% |
| Tubal Ligation (permanent) | Tubal ligation: A surgical procedure in which the fallopian tubes are blocked or cut. Vasectomy (male): A surgical procedure in which a provider closes or blocks the tubes that carry sperm. | • Intended to be permanent birth control. • No other form of birth control is necessary to prevent pregnancy. | • Cost. • Does not protect against sexually transmitted diseases. | 100% |

GSRS and the Office of DJS Statement on Dobbs v. Jackson Ruling

Dear Community,

On June 24, 2022, we woke up to a different world, a world in which a majority of sitting U.S. Supreme Court justices had turned their backs on more than fifty years of legal precedent to dismantle the constitutional right to privacy and bodily autonomy. The SCOTUS ruling on Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization has created a frightening new reproductive landscape. Abortion care is now illegal in nine states in the U.S., and 17 additional states are expected to ban or significantly limit abortion access in the coming months.

These historic changes to federal and state law will effect close to half of all women and menstruating people living in the United States. Yet we know that these effects will not be distributed or experienced equally. The Dobbs v. Jackson ruling will disproportionately harm communities of color, people living in poverty, and trans and non-binary people.

This ruling is about much more than what Andrea Smith calls the "binary statecraft" of a woman's right to choose versus the protection of fetal life. It is about whose rights are deemed worthy of protection under the U.S. Constitution. It is about how pregnant people and healthcare providers are targeted for criminal prosecution or civil penalty. It is about the failure of our nation-state to support all parents' and all children's access to equitable healthcare and other basic human needs like food and shelter.

We, as faculty and staff of the Gender, Sexuality and Race Studies Program and the Center for Diversity, Justice, and Sustainability, reject this wrongful and persecutory decision. We affirm the basic human right for all people to determine their own lives and govern their own bodies. We support a reproductive political movement that goes beyond the pro-choice / pro-life divide to instead embrace reproductive justice for all.

Scholars and activists Loretta Ross and Rickie Solinger define reproductive justice as:

(1) the right not to have a child, (2) the right to have a child, and (3) the right to parent children in safe and healthy environments. In addition, reproductive justice demands [a] sexual autonomy and gender freedom for every human being.

As educators in academic, co-curricular, and community settings at PLU, we believe that education is an essential tool for both navigating and actively fighting back against this new world. We encourage members of our community to seek out accurate sources of news and information on reproductive justice and healthcare issues, such as the Guttmacher Institute, the Center for Reproductive Rights, and Reproductive Justice. In turn, we must attend specifically to the ways in which this ruling intersects with histories of white supremacy, homophobia, and anti-trans culture and violence. Take a look at the following articles and videos/resources to learn more.
